

Pairing with Sakhulwazi to empower local women to be economically independent

Overview: Ohio State will return to Cape Town to serve the local community and continue to build relationships with local non-profit organizations. This trip will focus on the themes of education, health awareness, women/gender, and international development as students will learn how these issues intersect with the history, culture, politics, and economy of South Africa. Additionally, students will have cultural lessons throughout the trip to learn about language, music, dance, and history and will visit several of the city's main attractions.

Day-to-day: Service work centers primarily around a community organization called Sakhulwazi, located in Philippi Township. This organization seeks to empower the local community through women employment as well as teaching beading and sewing. The center also operates a community garden. Students will engage with the women, and assist in the garden on most days.

The Nitty-Gritty Details: Participants will stay in a local hostel. Some meals will be provided, but participants should expect to bring some additional funds for meals. Daily transportation will be booked prior to the group's arrival.
