

COMMUNITY COLLABORATIONS INTERNATIONAL

Overview: Community Collaborations International (CCI) takes a holistic approach to community recovery. CCI deploys volunteers where they are needed most and gets the most value out of each volunteer hour through effective management and comprehensive logistical support. The primary purpose of the project in Biloxi, Mississippi is gulf coast eco-system restoration. Community service projects include; working with community-based programs that serve youth, homeless, elderly and low-income members of the community.

Day-to-day: This is a 50 person trip and each day, the larger group might split into smaller groups to volunteer with a variety of organizations. Volunteers will complete projects such as; Shoreline restoration, Native plant propagation, sea grass restoration, wild-life habitat improvement, dune restoration, storm water treatment, public land restoration and invasive species removal

The Nitty-Gritty Details: Group members will sleep in large bunk rooms. Three meals per day will be provided by the site but participants may want to also purchase individual snacks for the week.
